Trained as both a fiber artist and painter, Stefanie Jacobson Kirkland incorporates aspects from each medium in her multi-layered works. Her Sheldon exhibit includes deconstructed urban landscape collages, representing an artist's self-portrait as Kirkland examines places she has lived and compares personal identity and memory with the cities she has called home.

Kirkland relocated to St. Louis in 2005 from San Francisco, where she received her Master's in Fine Arts degree in painting from the Academy of Art College. During her master's program, she studied in Corciano, Italy through American University under the tutelage of Barbara Rose. She received her undergraduate degree in Surface Pattern Design and Art History from Syracuse University in New York. Between her undergraduate and graduate programs, she worked as a professional textile designer in New York City and attended New York's Arts Student League to continue studying art.
