Parsonsfeld is a five-piece alt/folk band from Northampton, MA that infuses a rowdy, rock-and-roll spirit into bluegrass and folk music.

Chris Freeman (vocals, banjo), Antonio Alcorn (mandolin), Max Shakun (vocals, pump organ, guitar), Harrison Goodale (bass) and Erik Hischmann (drums), have toured steadily since their debut in 2010. In 2013, they recorded their debut album Poor Old Shine (Signature Sounds Recordings), produced by Sam Kassirer (Josh Ritter, Lake Street Dive). The critics were impressed, with David Vescey from The New York Times noting, “I fully expect to hear more from this band as the years go on,” and the U.K.’s Maverick Magazine calling it, “A blistering, energetic debut.” During the winter of 2013–2014, the band wrote and performed an original score for the acclaimed production of The Heart of Robin Hood at Harvard’s American Repertory Theater, and they continued the production for a four-month Broadway tryout in Canada in winter 2014–2015.
